STAGE COACH GOLD

THE PERSONIFICATION OF THE EXPANDING FRONTIER

The sturdy, practical Concord Wells Fargo stagecoaches provided speedy service across a vast territory during the nineteenth century. The (Butterfield) Overland route stretched to the Pacific starting in 1858. From 1866-69, Wells Fargo operated the major overland stagecoach routes west of the Missouri River, covering 2,500 miles of territory from California to Nebraska, Arizona to Idaho. Skilled drivers guided coaches pulled by teams of four or six horses, at an average speed of five miles per hour. There were stops every twelve miles to change horses, and about every forty-five miles to allow driver and passengers to eat a quick meal.

This American handmade bronze sculpture by Laran Ghiglieri is cast in the traditional "Lost Wax Casting" process and originally created with over 3000 individual pieces, making this one of the most detailed sculptures of its kind in world today.

Breathtaking in detail, this incredible sculpture's micro-finishing is simply awe inspiring and historically accurate. 'Stage Coach Gold' is reproduced in pure bronze, cast in dark patina finishes with hand-applied highlights that create natural variations in texture and color and then hand rubbed to bring out the awesome detail, making a unique and lasting sculpture that is an original work of art. This ensures that no two masterpieces are alike. The statue is then mounted on a beautiful solid maple base with an etched brass plate bearing the name of the bronze, the edition number, and the artist's name and signature.

The highest quality of bronze and the most precise forging techniques were used to create this masterpiece, ensuring this sculpture will remain a relevant and cherished treasure for generations to come.

Laran's painstaking attention to detail really comes to life in his rendition of cowboys. These are hard-working, hard-drinking, weathered men. Their attire was practical for their purpose, long coats for protection and weapons concealment and large wide-brimmed hats sheltered them from the sun. Laran's horses, in particular have a lifelike grace. In teams, they strain together; yet, each animal is a unique individual.

Laran spent the past year collaborating on this sculpture with Mark Russo, CEO of TIC, personifying the authentic Wells Fargo stagecoach. Inspiration and detail work was derived from months of research extracted from the original blueprints of the Concord Stage Company archives.

The piece now complete and currently on display in the prestigious Paul Zueger galleries in Colorado is a limited edition in bronze of 350, 35 in pure .999 fine silver and one available in pure .9999 gold. Priced at $38,500 in bronze, $175,000 in silver and $7.5 million in gold, this one piece has the potential of generating over $25 million in revenue for Treasure Investments. This one new image adds to TIC's 700 plus existing molds and pieces in its asset base and mold collection.

"We are excited to have commissioned this next great piece by Laran Ghiglieri for our extensive art collection," says Russo. "Ghiglieri is an American world-class sculptor who follows in his family's tradition of creating sculptures that are of fine artistic quality and excellence."

Ghiglieri is the son of sculptor Lorenzo Ghiglieri, whose sculptures have been owned by celebrities, presidents and even the Pope. Several of the Ghiglieris' works are included in Treasure Investments Corporation's collection of more than 700 original works of art. The company's mold collection was recently appraised at more than $900 million.
